Arrest of Moro Case Suspect Regarded as Breakthrough

Smith Assails Britain, U.S., Sees Delay of Black Rule

By David Ottaway SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Sept. 14 (WP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith of Rhodesia today blamed Britain and the United States for the fail-

At a press conference here, he also announced that the multiracial transitional government was banning the black-nationalist parties of Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe operating inside the country as part of its new campaign to "liquidate" the internal opposition.

He attacked Mr. Nkomo as "a monster of no mean proportions" and seemed to be shutting the door on any further negotiations with the co-leader of the externally based Patriotic Front.

"Certainly as far as I'm concerned I haven't left any doors open," he said. "I would sincerely hope I don't have to have any truck with the gentleman concerned. Somoza Calls National Guard Reserves

MANAGUA, Sept. 14 (AP) -President Anastasio Somoza today mobilized National Guard reserves to reinforce his battle-weary troops in their campaign to crush leftist guerrillas holding three cities in northwest Nicaragua

The rebels, trying to end the Somoza family's 41-year domination of Nicaragua, were strengthening their positions and manning barricades on the Pan-American Highway for the expected battles in the northwestern cities of Chi-nandega Esteli and Leon. Gen. Somoza decreed martial law for the entire nation late yesterday, and the call-up of reserves was ordered under that decree. The number of reservists involved was not immediately known.

Meanwhile, Gen. Somoza's troops carried out a house-to-house search of Masaya, the southern city they retook Tuesday, arresting or shooting any men they found.

Heavy fighting also was reported in Rivas, 80 miles south of Mana-gua and 15 miles from the Costa Rican border, and the rebels were reported regrouping for an attack on Masaya, 18 miles southeast of the capital.

The leftist guerrillas' cobblestone barricades on the Pan-American Highway stopped all traffic to Esteli, Chinandega and Leon.

U.S. Backs OAS Mediation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (NYT) - The Carter administration declared today that the fighting in Nicaragua had begun "to threaten the peace not only of Nicaragua but of the countries around it," and it offered support for prompt mediation by the Organiza-tion of American States.

The declaration was made by State Department spokesman Hodding Carter 3d, explaining why the United States now is backing a Venezuelan request that the 25member hemisphere organization convoke a meeting of foreign ministers to consider the Nicaragua sit-

But just as the permanent council of the OAS was reaching agreement at headquarters here on indef-inite postponement of a vote on convening the hemisphere foreign ministers, a report reached Wash-ington that a Nicaraguan military plane had dropped a bomb inside Costa Rica, allegedly in the pursuit of insurgents.

This prompted Costa Rica to call off the regional mediation effort begun a week ago by President Ro-drigo Carazo and to support instead the Venezuelan proposal for full-scale action by the OAS.

At his regular noon press meeting Mr. Carter also cited the apparent Nicaraguan incursion into Costa Rica as a reason for changing the U.S. approach.

Tension between Nicaragua and Costa Rica has been building since Gen. Somoza said Tuesday that his forces had routed 50 guerrillas coming from Costa Rica.

A California Daddy Longlegs Spider Enlivens Environmental War

By Ellen Hume

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 — First there was the snail darter, the furbish lousewort and the orange-bellied mouse. Now a blind little spider that lives in the caves along California's Stanislaus River has become the latest weapon in the battle between environmentalists and dam-builders.

But this time, the tables have turned: It is the water-project proponents, not the opponents, who are raising the spider specter, hoping that Congress will conclude that enough is enough - and loosen the requirements of the Endangered Species Act. Ironically, the environmentalists have been on the defensive since they won their greatest victory in June when the U.S. Supreme Court found that the nearly complete $116-million Tellico Dam in Tennessee could not be finished because it might wipe out the endangered snail darter, a three-inch fish.

In that case, dissenting Justice Lewis Powell Jr. urged Congress to amend the rigid Endangered Species Act, saying that newly discovered rare "cockroaches, water spiders or amoeba" might block any future U.S.

Since then, the endangered furbish lousewort plant has raised legal questions about building a new power plant in Maine, and the orange-bellied mouse has complicated siting requirements for a power plant near San Francisco.

By no coincidence this week, the spider species has entered the scene while the House amending a bill to extend and revise the Endangered Species Act.

Rep. Robert Leggett, D-Calif., has brought up the %-inch spider, thought to dwell in only two caves along the Stanislans. He argues that the spider might halt completion of the $340-million New Melones Dam. The dam's reservoir is scheduled to be partially filled this November. Citing a soon-to-be released report by the General Accounting Office, Rep. Leggett charged that the agency that administers the endangered-species law ignored the rare spiders because recognizing them "would cause the existing act to come under considerable ridicule and embarrassment."

He said that although a petition was filed ects have been studied and approved after with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service more negotiation. than three years ago, asking that the newly discovered New Melones Harvest Man Dad dy Longlegs spider be named an endangered species, little action was taken until recently, when the Fish and Wildlife Service discovered that the GAO was investigating.

Charge Disputed

Disputing Rep. Leggett's charge, the chief of the Fish and Wildlife Service's endgangered-species office said that staff shortages, the small size of the spider and other factors had stalled action until about four months ago.

This is not the only petition we have not been able to move on," the director, John Spinks, said. "It's a matter of inadequate staff. . . It is not an animal that's easily

The threat to the Endangered Species Act is as great as the threat to the endangered species. They're probably waiting [to decide about the spiders] so they won't add fuel to the fire, which is what Leggett wants to do."

Rep. Leggett's amendment would give the interior secretary greater flexibility in listing invertebrates such as the New Melones Harvest Man Daddy Longlegs, which technically is not a spider but a "spider-like insect."
Environmentalists fear that the Leggett amendment would be too broad, defusing one of their strongest weapons.

CAPE TOWN, Sept. 14 (UPI) — Hundreds of armed riot police swooped down on an illegal black squatters' camp today with tear gas and batons. Several residents were killed, including an infant trampled

The dawn raid on the camp in Cape Town's outskirts ended many months of relative racial calm in the white-ruled republic and brought a chorus of protests from church leaders.

Police said that a black attacked a policeman and was shot dead on the spot. Relatives of a second man said that he died soon after he was shot by police in the chest.

The baby, cradled across its mother's back in black African fashion, died when it was trampled underfoot in stampedes by crowds fleeing tear gas, witnesses said. A woman was hospitalized with a gunshot wound in her right arm.

The French government charges Amoco International and Mr. Phillips with negligence in the accident, claiming they "failed to issue adenate instructions to the crew the Amoco Cadiz in respect to the safe maintenance and operation of the hydraulic steering system and other vital systems."

The Amoco Cadiz reportedly lost its ability to steer while carrying some 220,000 tons of crude oil through stormy weather in the English Channel. The tanker was bound for Rotterdam from the

France contends that the defendants "failed to man the Amoco Cadiz with a competent master and watchkeeping deck officers with adequate experience or proper training or to provide them with proper steering directions, plots and charts "

The government charged that the ship's captain was negligent in not asking for help immediately after the steering failed, claiming he waited two hours. The ship eventually ran aground 7.5 miles from the Isle of Ushant, rupturing the hull and spilling oil all over the waters off the Brittany coast.

An attorney for the firm representing Amoco International said he had not yet seen the suit, but added that "Amoco considers that the incident is controlled by the international convention on civil liability for oil pollution, under which Amoco put up $16 million in

Terrorist Squad Recovers Art in Hamburg Raid

HAMBURG, Sept. 14 (AP) — Police said today that an anti-ter-rorist squad recovered stolen art trasures worth nearly $1 million when it raided a hotel room in search of a suspicious-looking, guntoting guest.

A spokesman said the raid late yesterday led to the arrest of five-men and the discovery of II paintings signed by modern and impres-sionist masters including Picasso. Renoir, Degas and Utrillo.

The management of the luxury hotel alerted police after hotel staff members saw a revolver cartridge drop out of a male guest's pocket. An anti-terrorist unit burst into the guest's room and arrested five men there — a 41-year-old Norwegan, three Swedes aged 34, 36 and 40, and a 33-year-old German with lives in Hamburg.

Minimal November Losses Expected

By John Herbers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (NYT)

- The results of primary elections in 14 states Tuesday reinforced major trends already under way in this year's state and federal campaigns: a minimum of party and White House influence, an advantage for incumbents, a low turnout of voters and the strong influence of heavy spending and intense campaigning by special interests.

With only six states left to hold primaries, political experts predict only modest gains for Republican candidates in the November general election, even though the party out of the White House normally picks up offices in a mid-term elec-

But the next Congress is likely to be even more difficult for the president to deal with than the present one, which has refused to go along with many White House initiatives even though it is heavily Democrat-ic. This is because many incumbent Democrats have established them-selves as independent of the White House and the national party.

Republicans thus have given up hope of winning back the 45 sears they lost in the post-Watergate elections of 1974. They are talking of winning 20 to 25 at the most. They could lose two or three seats in the Senate although they are in the Senate, although they are hopeful of winning that many.

Republican Chances

The best hope for Republicans is in governorships, of which they hold only 12. But the strong showing by incumbent Democrats indi-cates that at least some of them would be difficult to beat in the meral election. The veterans, one of the most powerful political pressure groups in the country, succeeded in killing a move to limit the lifelong hiring preferences that the U.S. government traditionally has extended to former military service personnel Mr. Carter contended that the preference discriminated against women and minorities.

The labor lobbies feared that the president's efforts to improve hiring and firing procedures would result in wholesale discharges. Sup-ported on the floor by Rep. Wil-liam Clay, D.-Mo., whose St. Louis district is home for many U.S. employees, the lobbyists threatened an effort to kill the bill by any means unless more job protections

In the end, some protections were written in, and unions repre-senting the U.S. workers were greater bargaining powers. But the House refused to go along with the proposal to give U.S. employees the right to engage in partisan politicking, though Mr. Carter, in a compromise, expressed a willingness to push hard for that right in separate legislation.

Many of the compromises were orked out by Rep. Morris Udall, D.-Ariz., who is vice chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee. When debate began yesterday on the final sections of the bill, he urged the House not to become mired in still more labor-management rhetoric. "There is no justification for it," he said.

Rep. Clay agreed. He said that compromise was "the best that reasonable persons can expect under the existing political circumstances and climate."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (WP) Energy Secretary James Schles-inger has told U.S. occupational-health officials that national security could be endangered if a proposed regulation is enacted to cut worker exposure to a suspected cancer-causing metal.

Officials said Mr. Schlesinger's warning was the first time that the rationale of national security had been used to oppose costly produc-tion changes required of industry for worker safety.

key. Greek Foreign Minister George Rallis returned to Greece this week from what has been described as a highly successful visit to the Soviet Union. The Russians are said to have shown unexpected sympathy for Greece's position on key international issues, especially in con-nection with Greece's relations with Turkey.

The Greek and Soviet governments issued a joint communique Monday, pledging to strengthen their bilateral ties and calling for increased efforts toward East-West

Mr. Rallis is the first senior Cabinet official to visit Moscow since Greece's military dictatorship was brought down in 1974. The U.S. embargo on arms shipments to Turkey was imposed after Turkey's invasion of Cyprus, which had con-tributed to the downfall of Greece's military government.

Greece and its friends in the U.S. Congress campaigned vigorously this summer against the Carter administration proposal to lift the embargo. Only compromise language of the bill stood in the way, and the House on Tuesday approved that, sending the bill to President Carter. The fact than Mr. Rallis visited the Soviet Union so Rallis visited the Soviet Union so soon after Congress had agreed to lift the embargo was seen here as no coincidence.

All shades of political opinion here are surprised and pleased by the outcome of the Rallis visit to Moscow. According to the Greeks, the Soviet Union even supported the Greek position on the Acgean dispute, the most contentious issue between Greece and Turkey aside from Cyprus.

The Greeks and Turks have overlapping claims in the Aegean that brought them close to conflict in 1976. The Turks argue that mineral rights in the Aegean should be divided by a line midway between the two countries, but the Greeks contend that the Aegean is in effect a Greek lake because of a string of Greek islands close to the Turkish

According to the official Greek news agency, Soviet Foreign Minis-ter Andrei Gromyko supported the Greek position that the presence of the islands made the Aegean a special case that deserved special treatment. There has been no confirmation of this from the Soviet side, and there is some skepticism that Mr. Rallis' visit produced any real breakthrough. Any substantial change in Soviet policy in the east-

Very heavy seas sent waves of 50 to 60 feet smashing into the vessel. "It was as bad as any hurricane," he said.

The ship docked in New York today, about 28 hours behind schedule, and is to head back to England tonight.

Capt. Ridley said that in 30 years on the Atlantic he had seen only two other storms to match the ferocity of this one. "It was a rogue sea, with some totally unexpected punches," he said. "At one point, a wall of water suddenly hit us broadside on the bow and crumpled the iron railing. The power was tremendous."

The captain spent a sleepless 36 hours holding the 963-foot ship at the proper angle. Its speed was held to a minimum to reduce shock to the 1,500 passengers aboard.

An estimated $50,000 in superficial damage resulted from sudden lurches. Furniture was toppied, bottles and crockery sent flying. Several passengers were hurled from chairs. Two large refri gerators were wrenched loose from galley walls and smashed on the floor. A cargo elevator was damaged when its trolleys broke loose.

No serious injuries to passengers were reported, although one elderly woman sustained a broken arm. One crew member fractured a collar bone and another sprained a wrist.

DETROIT, Sept. 14 (UPI) — The Ford Motor Co. has denied charges leveled by an Indiana grand jury that it committed reckless homicide and was criminally reckless in the design of a Pinto automobile in which three teen-age girls were

The indictment charges Ford with three counts of reckless homicide, a felony, and one count of criminal recklessness, a misdemeanor Each count carries a viction.

The rally jeered and booed La-bor Minister Robert Boulin, who had canceled a planned visit to Marseilles, apparently to avoid the unruly crowd.

Emergency Fund

Mr. Boulin meanwhile attended a ceremony in Prime Minister Ray-mond Barre's office setting up a 3 billion franc ($690 million) emergency government fund to provide soft loans for hard-hit business firms. The leftist opposition and labor unions have condemned the fund as insufficient.

Leaflets handed out during the Marseilles meeting by the pro-So-cialist French Democratic Labor Confederation (CFDT) said, "It is easier to condemn thousands of workers to unemployment at a distance than to come here to face the ger and see the waste."

Ignoring the labor unrest, the government said that it was completing work on a master plan for the steel industry which is expected to use government financial help to seek higher productivity in French mills and a drop in the country's total production, now close to 20 million metric tons a year.

Up to 6,000 of the Lorraine steel industry's 37,000 workers are ex-

After Me, the Deluge

When the plane assigned to President Marcos of the Philippines crashed - without him on board — the extent of death and destruction was very grim. And while many Filipinos are probably grateful that their president was safe, some must have wondered just what would have happened to their land had the vital and authoritarian leader succumbed. For the Philippines, like too many other countries, finds its government hanging on a single life and must be prepared for wrenching changes should that link be broken.

'After me," Louis XV of France is alleged to have said, "the deluge." And he was right: Louis XVI was overwhelmed by revolution.

But Louis XV was talking about a whole system that was degenerating into chaos, a system in which a single man might, as Louis XIV had said, be the state, but whose successor in line of descent would be entitled to the same authority. Today, in many lands, it is the single individual who has won that authority, by his personal attributes - his successor must establish his own case; it is not conceded to him by lineage or by popular

This is not true, of course, in the working democracies. The United States survived not only the assassination of President Kennedy, but the resignation, under the pressure of serious charges, of Vice President Agnew and President Nixon. France, whose Fifth Republic constitution was largely the work of that great personality, Charles de Gaulle, has been having some difficulties in adapting its politics to a time without De Gaulle (but then, the United States Constitution has often been adapted, often amended, during its nearly 200 years of active life), but the continuity of government has been maintained. Britain saw the mighty Winston Churchill succeeded by Clement Attlee, and Attlee's Silent Revolution overtaken by Churchill's Conservatives. This made for exciting politics, but each government was based on law and democratic choice - and accepted as Contrast this with the silent maneuvers that followed the death of Stalin, and Khrushchev's denunciation of the Stalinist regime; the way in which Khrushchev was retired and the tensions that surround every report on the health of Leonid Brezhnev. Or with what is still occurring in China in the wake of the death of Mao Tse-tung. Or what might occur when the aging Tito passes on. Here are substantial states, representing advanced theories of social and economic living and with enormous official bureaucracies. Yet for all practical purposes continuity is not more assured there than it is in Nicaragua, where the Somozas have enjoyed government as a kind of nouveau riche family estate.

There was a time, during World War II, when democracy was contrasted mainly with Nazism and with the evils Hitler produced from his personal rule. Those arguments still have validity. But peoples who are under personal rule, whatever colors or symbols may be used to signal that rule, must also consider some very practical points. In days of Divine Right, kings might claim authority from God, and their subjects might not contest it at any point in a royal line. But no matter how well they run affairs, no matter how strong they may be, "after me, the deluge," is the one motto that individual rulers have in Any day now, a group of U.S. congressmen will try to persuade the House of Representatives to welsh on a deal it has made with the public about how Congress should be paid. We hope the House has enough character and the public enough vigilance -- to stop the new effort in its tracks.

Welshing on Congressional Pay

The deal in question arose over Congress' urgent pleadings in 1976 and 1977 that its members were underpaid. Indeed they were. The congressional salary of $44,600 had not been raised since 1969, a failure that was blocking necessary pay increases in the other branches as well. Still, $44,600 was and is a lot more than most voters earn — not to mention the new figure of $57,500. Congress rightly feared public hostility. Was there some way to put a better face on a pay rise?

There was. If congressmen were paid more in direct earnings, then perhaps strict limits could at last be imposed on their outside earnings. While virtually no congressman would, in private, favor such a limit, it seemed particularly attractive in the post-Watergate reform climate. It could relieve the suspicions that inevitably arise, fairly or not, whenever a congressman accepts a fat "honorarium" for an easy speech or a legal fee for ill-defined services. Thus the deal. It was nowhere spelled out but everyone understood it: The price of the raise was the reform. And both were enacted.

Now, however, the bargain is in jeopardy. A group of House members, led by Rep. James Quillen, a Tennessee Republican, is trying to undo the reform part of the deal. It does not forbid outside earnings, only limits them to 15 percent of congressional pay, or about $8,600. But even that is too little for the Quillen group. Its members think the combined ceiling of salary and outside earnings - $66,125 - is not enough and are about to proffer legislation on the House floor that would repeal the outside-income limit altogether.

The merits of their position have always seemed weak to us. To seek higher salaries through outside earnings is to permit backdoor earnings, and to do that is to invite backdoor influence. If even the new salary limits are too low, then let that be argued out in public. As last year's experience showed, that will always be difficult. And that, it is easy to suspect, is what underlies the repeal effort. It is a way of sticking a toe in the postpost-Watergate waters, to see, even at the risk of looking like welshers, if the public is still hot. It is an effort that deserves to be

International Opinion

Worse May Lie Ahead

The aircraft horror [in Rhodesia] will strengthen the morale and influence of the guerrillas on the ground, and martial law and mobilization will only be seen as further white acknowledgment of coming defeat . . . Worse may lie ahead, and even if Mr. Nkomo wishes, he probably could not prevent such incidents in such a war with such deep and poisoned roots. Dr. Owens' well-meaning efforts and his continued protestations of the need for an all-party conference are shown by events as even more irrelevant. When negotiations take place, the circumstances will be very different from those predicated in the Anglo-American plan, and it is in foreseeing and planning for such circumstanmes that the British government should be busy.

For, short of a rapid military takeover of the country by the two Patriotic Front formations on the heels of a massive white exodus into South Africa, Britain, the self-elected residual authority, is sure to be drawn in at some later stage - and probably in the most embarrassing and perhaps even perilous circumstances.

Explosive Mixture

The events of the last few days in Iran have demonstrated how difficult it is to implement a reform policy in that country. The years of systematic suppression of all opposition and indeed of all political discussion have led to too much bitterness among the critics of the regime for the tiny safety valves of protest permitted recently to have taken off much of the pressure. And now the large numbers of people killed in last week's demonstrations have led to a further deterioration. In addition, more and more relatives of political prisoners are beginning to hear what is happening to their people in jail. Few now really believe that the shah is prepared to accept constitutional restraints on his power, however much he may say so for tactical reasons. Small traders threatened by monopolist competition, progressive students and intellectuals and unemployed farmers dispossessed by the land reforms add up to an explosive mixture that only stringent security measures can

All current accounts of Afghanistan talk of the flood of Russian advisers, military and civilian, who have moved in since the coup in

Even granted that Afghanistan cannot be governed in the accepted sense from Kabul, because of its remote vastnesses and uncooperative tribes, the Soviet presence there must in time pose the threat of unrest in the Baluchi areas of Pakistan and Iran that the successive rulers of those states have spent much effort suppressing.

To influence events in those areas the Soviet Union does not have to do anything so crude as invade, as Afghanistan shows. It is enough to be on hand at the right time.

TOHANNESBURG -- When Stephen Biko died, a year ago Tuesday, it shook South Africa and the world. Yet on the anniversary, many who saw the event as a watershed in the country's history have concluded that the racial sys-tem the young black leader opposed may be incapable of the fundamental reform many think is necessary if a disastrous showdown between blacks and whites is to be

A wealthy industrialist and contributor to reformist causes was asked recently whether be thought that events since the death had moved the white and black communities closer to lasting reconciliation. He paused before replying:

"It's like the French say — The more things change, the more they stay the same."

It was an assessment that both government supporters and black leaders could endorse.

Cautious Reforms

At the annual round of provincial congresses held by the ruling National Party this week ministers have competed with one another in assuring their following that white preeminence outside the impovershed black homelands -- the central principle of apartheid - will not be undermined by the cautious reforms of recent months. Among black leaders not imprisoned or silenced by the government, the mood is largely one of foreboding.
"I would say we've actually had an increase in government intransigence and intolerance, and an increase in the hopelessness of whites who hoped things would take a turn for the better," said Bishop Desmond Tutu, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, one of a number of black leaders who commented on the occasion of the anniversary. "It doesn't look like a rosy prospect in the immediate future, but history indicates that you can't always keep a people down."

Like the killing by the police of 69 black demonstrators at Sharpe-ville on March 21, 1960, and the outbreak of black rioting in Soweto on June 16, 1976, which ended months later with more than 700 blacks dead, the death of Biko on Sept. 12, 1977, will be a landmark in any history of apartheid.

Shortly after 7 o'clock that evening, a warder at Pretoria Central Prison found the 30-year-old Biko lying face down, dead, on a cell floor. The events that had brought him there, revealed later in court, scandalized even the most resolute backers of white supremacy.

The death caused an immediate uproar among young blacks, who knew Biko, founder of the Black Consciousness Movement, as their most charismatic leader. The fury was compounded when the inquest revealed that their hero had died not of a hunger strike, as Justice Minister James Kruger originally suggested, but of severe brain injuries, suffered while in police custody and that the injuries had gone untreated for at least six days. The treatment meted out to Biko by the Port Elizabeth security po-lice unit, which arrested him, made headlines worldwide.

Police Version

The unit commander, Col. Pieter Goosen, led his men in suggesting that the black leader received his head injuries in a scuffle that Biko initiated, not in a police beating, as counsel for the Biko family alleged. But the police denials made little impact against their admission that, sooner than admit Biko to a local hospital, where he would have been in civilian care, they trans-ferred him 750 miles by road, na-ked on a mat in the back of a Land Rover, to the prison hospital in Pretoria. He died there, still untreated, less than 12 hours after

The inquest magistrate exonerat-ed the police, but the United Na-tions did not. Before the inquest opened, the government, apparently fearful of a major black uprising, launched a major crackdown on black opposition elements, detain-ing practically all of Biko's princi-pal associates, banning all the groups he founded, and closing the country's principal black newspa-per, the World. Shortly afterward, the United Nations Security Council responded by imposing a mandatory arms embargo on South Africa, the first puntive action against a member state in the world body's history.

rate Biko, the security police detained at least 11 friends and relatives of the Black Consciousness leader, including his sister and his brother-in-law.

Last week, Kruger, who rode out demands for his resignation in the wake of the Biko scandal announced a fresh one-month ban on the man widely reckoned as the leader of blacks in Soweto, Dr. Nthato Motlana. All the while, the government has been warning whites to expect an upsurge of black terrorism, and parliament, the largest majority in the republic's 67-year history. Reformers hoped that Vorster. has mounted dozens of trials of alleged terrorists around the country. With the example of Rhodesia at hand, more whites are emigrating. and schemes to beat foreign-exchange laws are a primary topic of cocktail-party conversation.

Black leaders, including some churchmen, have taken to saying privately — to say so publicly would bring certain prosecution that the question is no longer whether violence will be necessary to bring freedom for blacks, but how much violence will required.

The government, noting that calm has returned to most black townships after the rioting in 1976 and 1977, dismisses fears that violence eventually could become endemic, toppling white rule. But not all whites are so sure.

"Sooner or later, the opposition must rear up again - and in an angrier, more destructive form," the Rand Daily Mail warned in a recent editorial. "People's frustrations and aspirations cannot forever be confined within jail cells. Bannings do not end human anger and striving. Far better, while there is still time, to listen and to talk and to negotiate."

U.S. Strengthens China Connection

By James Reston

WASHINGTON — The Mid- that they must make some conces die East summit meeting at Camp David is dominating the foreign news out of Washington these days, but underneath the summit, other important things are happening in world affairs. For example, the relations be-tween the United States and the People's Republic of China are now entering the most interesting phase since Henry Kissinger's secret visit to Peking during the Nixon administration.

• As a result of very quiet and unreported negotiations, the United States has recently agreed in principle to put a new Chinese nication satellite into space, to improve Peking contacts inter-nally and with the rest of the world.

Agreements

• There have been other unnoticed agreements between Washing-ton and Peking. A mission from Communist China will visit the United States next month to arrange for the first contingent of Chinese students to study in the

• The Peking government has informed Washington that it plans to send at least 10,000 young men and women to study in the United States and other Western countries by 1985, and that it is not asking for scholarships or financial aid, but intends to pay all their

 Meanwhile, what is more obvious but no less significant, Peking is now showing great interest in U.S. equity financing. Major U.S. commercial companies, many more than is generally realized, have already sent missions to China and have been invited to make propos-als, mainly in the field of natural resource development, heavy indus-try, construction, mining, and particularly oil exploration.

It may be important to be clear about what this means and what it does not mean. What President Carter is trying to do, as I under-stand it — and it is a very difficult and risky exercise — is to negotiate and do business with Peking as well as Moscow, just as he is trying at Camp David to reconcile the differences between President Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Begin of Israel.

He is not trying to play "the China card" against Moscow, or the "Moscow card" against Peking, but what is more difficult, trying to play all cards for some kind of compromise that will avoid war between China and the Soviet Union and between Israel and the Arab

At this point in all these tangles everything is in doubt but nothing has been lost China is doing bus ness with the United States increas ingly, without any agreement or the future of Taiwan. The Sovie Union is marking off its legal de mands against American correspondents and businessmen, and President Brezhnev is meeting with Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massa chusetts and agreeing to release Jewish dissidents in the Soviet Union in the interest of better U.S. Soviet relations.

The reaction of the U.S. Con The reaction of the U.S. Congress to all this may be critical. There has, I think, been a vaguate feeling on Capitol Hill that the political struggles were going too fast. That in fighting the president or the energy bill, and on the Middle East and on defense appropriations, maybe the Congress was too critical and hurting the being too critical and harring the country to the detriment of the president in the rest of the world.

Accordingly, there is a change developing in Washington now—2 feeling in both parties, among the liberals in the Democratic Party who are disappointed in Carter and even among the conservative Republicans, who watch the popularity polls and think Carter is in serious trouble. There is an instinct here in Washington now that may be they ought to give him a chance to work his way with the Russiane and the Chinese, the Israelis and

It may be significant that Secretary of State Vance has not been a Camp David all the time, dealing with the Middle East problem. There are critical problems about the control of strategic weapons with the Russians, about the future of the Chinese, the Japanese, the Taiwanese and many other nations and about the problems of Europe and the threat of revolution in Africa and civil war in Latin America:

Under the summit, the State De partment is trying to deal with al these things, to do business with al the contending parties. It is a com-plicated and devilish business, and nobody is likely to be satisfied with the results, but Washington is a least holding the ring with the Chinese, the Russians and in the Mid-

Why do you not have the courage to [remind Moscow's rulers each year that they did not fulfill the international treaty signed by Stalin with Churchill and Roosevelt in 1945? Called "Declaration on Liberated Europe," [the treaty promises] to all liberated Europeans full freedom of voting and self-determi-nation. Western Allies fulfilled it to the western and southern Euro-peans, Russia to none of her neigh-bors. Its fulfillment would solve all the problems of the Vienna and Geneva conferences. A zone of free nations across Europe would enhance the security of the West as well as the East. The Russian objec-tion that the Red army was invited to occupy the satellite countries could be verified by a neutrally supervised referendum, showing the free will of mid-European people. The West has the full right to ask for, and the Western signatories have an obligation to insist on, the Eastern signatory's fulfilling of the international treaty.

More on Herbs

Waverley Root's article (IHT, Aug. 23) concludes with a wish that a "herb dealer" or "someone from the other side" speak up about the virtues of herbal remedies, lambasted in the article by Jane E. Brody. I am neither an herb dealer nor a partisan of herbal remedies, but, having a certain knowledge of the plants in question I find many of the conclusions drawn in Miss Brody's article misleading and would like to clear up some things. Certainly, there are herbs that can be dangerous, but by and large, a reasonable person runs no risk by occasionally employing the herbs that are commercially available. But what about those herbs that Miss Brody (quoting a Dr. Der Marderosian) calls "too dangerous to be on the shelves of any food store?" Mistletoe, for example, is said to contain "toxic proteins that can produce anemia and hemorrhage in the liver and intestines. True, large doses of the plant can be harmful, but when taken in doses given in any good herbal it is ders, especially epilepsy, and has been employed to stop internal

Next, shave grass (horsetail or equisutum) is shamed as a "diuretic and dyspepsia agent which has toxins that can produce severe neuro-logical reactions." I read in "The Complete Book of Herbs and Spices" by Lowenfeld and Bach: Horsetail or equisutum tea is a remedy for all chest complaints, and is even successful in some cases of chronic bronchitis and tuberculosis. Its high content of silicic acid enriches the blood, encouraging the formation of blood corpuscles and is helpful for anaemia, loss of blood and diseases of the kidneys and bladder." As in her previous example, Miss Brody seems to exclude any possible virtues in the list of effects she attributes to this plant, and she continues in the same vein "Sassafras tea (made from sassafras root bark) . . . contains safrole, an established cause of cancer and a po-tent inhibitor of certain liver enzymes" (emphasis added). Indeed, pure safrole, called oil of sassafras, can be dangerous; never-theless its chief use is for flavoring purposes, "particularly to conceal the flavor of opium when given to children," says Mrs. M. Grieve in her "Modern Herbal," and she con-tinues, "In the United States it is employed for flavoring effervescent drinks." Sassafras tea, with its small dose of safrole, is no doubt safer than opium-loaded medicine

(cough syrup?) or "effervescent drinks," which its concentrated oil is used to flavor. Dried sassafras leaves are, by the way, the famous

"file powder" used to make a cele brated Louisiana Cajun specialty file gumbo.

Lastly we come to those herba preparations Miss Brody says have vere and terrifying effects on the mind." Indeed, nutmeg can have narcotic effects if taken in large quantities; nevertheless, as much as half a grated nutmeg is said to have curative powers when, for example it is mixed with a tablespoon of rum and taken in severe cases of diarrhea. Finally we have the example of the young man who was crazed by the jinsonweed tea he brewed for himself. Despite the poisonous qualities of the fresh plant, had the same young man suf-fered from asthma and inhaled the smoke of the burning dried leaves he would have praised their effect rather than suffered from it.

Admittedly, some of the claims for herbal remedies are as exaggerated as the dangers cited by Miss Brody. However, once experiments with tinctures and extracts (like the safrole cited earlier) are excluded as too potent to be toyed with by amateurs, there are a lot of herbal remedies that seem to be of no risk.

But herbs can not be experiment ed with medically without a goot herbal, like Mrs. Grieve's, as & guide. The importance of such a book is not to be underestimated. tion: "A knowledge of herbs is a necessary as a knowledge of pathol the simplest ailments is to be successful."

Bonn Refuses Yugoslav Bid On Extraditions

BONN, Sept. 14 (AP) - The West German government said yes-terday that it has rejected a Yugoslav request for the extradition of three Croatians sought as terrorists

One of the three, Stefan Bilandzic, was the man whose freedom was demanded by terrorists who attacked the West German consulate in Chicago last month.

The decision against extraditing him, Ljubomir Dragoja and Nikola Milicevic may affect Bonn's request for the extradition of four accused members of the Baader-Meinhol gang, Brigitte Monhaupt, Rolf Clemens Wagner, Peter Boock and Sieglinde Gutrun Hoffmann, who were arrested last May in Yugosla-

West German government spokesman Armin Gruenewald said a German court has ruled that there are insufficient grounds for extraditing Mr. Milicevic and Mr. Dragoja, and that there are legal proceedings in West Germany against Mr. Bilandzic involving some accusations similar to those made against him in Yugoslavia. Mr. Bilandzic, believed to be the principal figure in a Croatian separatist group, has been accused of various fences, including smuggling weapons into Yugoslavia.

King Vidor, at 83, Prepares New Film

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss PARIS, Sept. 14 (IHI) — King Vidor, come to France to attend the Deauville festival last week, is spending a few days in Paris before returning to his California ranch, where he is preparing his next film.

Movies in France

At 83, this hearty, large-framed Texan of soft voice and mild manner, can boast of the longest directorial career in the movies and one of the most distinguished. He has been "in pictures" most of his life. He has braved all the awesome studio bosses from Louis B. Mayer to Sam Goldwyn, done things very much his own way in spite of them, making them millions in the process, and met with assurance every change the industry has undergone in more than half a century, including the coming of the talkies and color and the disappearance of the once-almighty stars. The experience seems to have stimulated him and he is as eager as ever to get to work.

Vidor fell under the spell of the cinema when he was a schoolboy in Galveston, Texas, He bought a movie camera and shot and developed his own films. In 1915, growing impatient, he and his teen-aged bride, Florence Vidor, got a jalopy and headed for Hollywood. She took the wheel and he filmed the countryside as they motored. Both of them found work as extras on their arrival and he studied the me-

leading roles. They divorced and Florence Vidor rose to be a reigning star. She had a gracious, aristocratic air as well as striking beauty and was one of the few screen actresses who could personify a great lady with-out making audiences laugh. She specialized in such parts in Lubitsch's "Marriage Circle" and "The Patriot," with Emil Jannings, and in many other such as "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." When the talkies came, she retired to marry the violinist. Jascha Heifetz. She died earlier this year.

Vidor, having mastered all the aspects of the craft, was engaged by the Metro company and entrusted to direct Laurette Taylor in "Peg O' My Heart." Miss Taylor had been playing the forlorn Irish waif on the stage since 1912. Makeup magic restored her to wistful adolescence and she was so pleased that she kept a copy of the film to show her friends and impresarios how youthful she could look. She ran it so of-ten at her soirces that her guests would cautiously inquire whether there would be another projection before accepting her invitations. Renowned for his versatility, Vi-dor was handed the most diverse scripts. The authors he has filmed range from Tolstoy to Elinor Glyn. "Elinor Glyn was a stickler for accuracy about aristocratic society," he recalled. "When I was society," he recalled. "When I was directing 'His Hour,' her story of Petrograd high-life, all the grand dukes and duchesses came from Central Casting. Elinor took charge of placing them properly for the re-ception scenes. Why, the Popoffs would never sit next to the Romidanivskys. They haven't spoken in years,' she would announce and then reshuffle the constumed extras around the table, according to all the 'in' gossip of the czarist court." Many people living or travel-ling abroad can buy the new Vidor captured the approval of the intelligentsia, then scornful of movies in general, with "Wild Oranges," a beautiful motion picture — from Hergesheimer's novelette - which he shot on location in the Florida Everglades. The moment was ripe and "The Big Parade" emerged to break atten-dance records everywhere. Both Bernard Shaw and Thomas Mann praised it as an honest account of the conflict and it remains the only motion picture to attain two-year show engagement on Broadway.

A Boost for MGM

"The Big Parade" with its huge box-office takings, established the newly formed Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer firm as a prime Hollywood company. Vidor's original contract assured him of benefiting from its profits, but before its release the studio executives predicted sorrowfully that it was bound to be a catastrophic flop and generously bought his shares.

"I didn't care," said Vidor, "I was more interested in making more films than in making money. When 'The Big Parade' proved a big hit, irving Thalberg, who was in charge of MGM production, asked me what I would do next. I told him that I wanted to show an average American under fire, not in war but in peacetime. 'In what?' he inquired. 'In life,' I said. He allowed it was an interesting idea. but was puzzled and distrustful. Still, he thought it might be a hit, too, and he was afraid I might make it for another studio. My first title was 'One of the Mob,' but that had underworld connotations, so I called it 'The Crowd,' the story of a young middle-class man faced with everyday existence and forced against his will into the common mold. It was up for the Academy award in 1928, but Louis B. Mayer, the studio chief, voted against it in favor of a more popular film now forgotten. 'The Crowd' has survived for 50 years. I was very pleased that it was enthusiastically received at the Deauville festival the other day."

Vidor astounded Mayer and Thalberg again with his next proposition when he announced that his first talkie would be "Hallelniah." a story of the Deep South with an allblack cast.

"They had all sorts of ridiculous objections," he remembered with a chuckle. "They said that black audiences would come and white audiences would stay away. They said the film would be banned in the South, but I'm a Southerner, I knew better. It was an unusual motion picture in its day — in 1929 — and in a way a breakthrough. It still runs in theaters."

Vidor enjoys rising to a challenge. Once when outlining a project, a producer cut him short. "You can't film thought, as you're proposing. You can only film action," ruled the studio wise man. To prove his point, Vidor has made a film on thought, "Truth and Illusion," a movie on metaphysics. It is his favorite work and he intends to show it to film students when he lectures next.

Belgian's Award-Winning Project

Computerizing the Unruly North Sea

By Jan Sjoby

BRUSSELS, Sept. 14 (IHT) — The 1978 Francqui Prize, Belgium's most prestigious scientific award, went to Jacques Nihoul, professor of applied sciences at the Universities of Liege and Louvain. The prize — meaning a million Belgian francs in cold cash and longlasting glory — was awarded to the 41-year-old scientist "for his contributions to fundamental theories of hydrodynamic phenomena in the oceans." Prof. Nihoul was in charge of Belgium's 1970-76 Sea Program, pursued by the Belgian Scientific Policy Services with the support of NATO's Committee for the Challanges to Modern Society. Prof. Niboul, a physicist, chemist and mathematician — with degrees from the University of Liege, MIT and Cambridge in ascending order — has devised a way and ways to mathematically coordinate data from specialists in various fields related to hydrography, oceanography, marine biology and environental research and to translate their combined research into computer language. As a director and coordinator of the Sea Program, the professor insisted that the various specialists involved shouldn't be allowed to work as they wished, going off at odd angles of thought and investi-gation. There had to be an overall plan, he insisted, a mathematical model to inform scientists what answers were needed when and where. With his team, representing a number of European universities. the professor set about ascertaining equations capable of ascribing the manifold aspects of the unruly North Sea: waves, tides, currents, plankton, seaweed and the dissemi nation of pollution from inland a reporter for the Belgian Institute. Some sensitive adjustments had to be made, particularly in the 'descriptive' sciences such as biology, which had to be made 'quantitative' in order to make a mathematical model. Computers, clever as they may be, do not distinguish between biological species; they merely keep track of the biomass they represent.

The Beligan Navy supplied logis-tics, converting a ship, the Mechelen, into an oceanographic research vessel. Britain lent a hand, having certain common interests with the Belgians in that particular stretch of water.

The Sea Program was ceremoniously ended in 1976 and the results eight solid volumes with mathematical formulas concerning data on fluid and rational mechanics were handed to Rik Vanderkerkhove, minister of state for scientific policy. Britain posted a visible trade surplus in August 1977. The current plus in August of £58 million—the first monthly surplus since April plus in August of £58 million — the first monthly surplus since April — compared with a revised £132-milhon deficit in July and a year-earli-er surplus of £136 million, the De-partment of Trade said today.

Dollar Rises In a Day of Tense Trade

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP-DJ) -The dollar fluctuated erratically to end generally higher in extremely nervons and tense foreign-exchange trading today as the market anxiously awaited news from Camp David, Md., about the talks between Israeli and Egyptian leaders.
The main factor in the market was definitely Camp David. Nothing else really mattered. And it's going to be like that again tommorstressed one senior foreignexchange dealer.

For the time being, the market appeared to forget the dollar's "fundamental problems" and instead it focused on the immediate political implications of the Mideast summit talks. The smallest bits of news from Camp David had major impacts on exchange rates.

For instance, after an Israeli embassy spokesman in Washington called "completely untrue" reports that Israel had agreed to withdraw from the West Bank, the dollar plummeted on the foreign-exchange market. It had earlier risen against the Deutsche mark to 1.99 DM on hopes of a major Israeli concession over the West Bank. But after the Israeli denial, the dollar fell to 1.9818 DM, for a gain of 38

The £190-million improvement in Britain's visible trade balance last month was due to a sharp £216-million drop in the value of imports while exports remained fairly level. Reduced oil imports and an improvement in the balance of erratic items - such as precious stones, aircraft, ships and oil installations - accounted for about 75 percent of the drop in import value. Massey-Ferguson Ltd. will reduce its work force to 58,000 from 67,000 worldwide, a move expected to result in a pre-tax savings of about $100 million, which will be reflected in 1979 fiscal results, president Victor Rice said in Toronto. Experts were continuing work on detailed questions late today. While there was as yet no clear sign whether the leaders had developed a common platform to resolve differences between them on the EMS. West German government spokes-man Armin Gruenewald noted that "if nothing had been accomplished, then the experts would not have reason to meet." China Lifts Trade Pact With Japan

TOKYO, Sept. 14 (UPI) - China and Japan have agreed in principle on an extension of their trade agreement and on $2 billion in loans from Japan to finance Chinese machinery imports, Japanese news media reported from Peking today.

The basic agreement came in talks in Peking between Minister of International Trade and Industry Toshio Komoto and three key Chinese officials — vice premiers Li Hsien-nien and Kang Shih-en and Foreign Trade Minister Li Chang.
The Yomiuri newspaper said basic agreement was reached on a $2-billion credit to China from Japan's Export-Import Bank. The credit would be the largest the bank has ever granted to a foreign country and would be used to buy Japanese machinery for increasing China's coal and oil production.

tails of this loan are still under discussion. The Chinese wanted the loan denominated in dollars, ap-parently in the hope that the dollar's decline would make repayment easier in the future.

However, the newspaper said de-

The Japanese wanted the loan agreement to be yen-based. The Chinese also were reported to have agreed to a Japanese request that the loan be repayable in five years at an interest rate not less than 7.25 percent. The trade pact agreed on yester-day will extend from 1978-1990 inclusive. It is an expansion of an agreement signed in February calling for a $20 billion swap of Chinese coal and oil for Japanese industrial hardware from 1978-85

If its terms are carried out, China in the 1980s could well become Japan's second largest trade part-ner after the United States, restoring the Japanese trade situation that existed before World War II.

The new agreement comes about one month after China signed a treaty of friendship and non-ag-gression with Japan.

"The message for the policy makers seems clear: no dramatic improvement in inflation is on the horizon regardless of policy moves, the forecasters said. The man with exceptional goals needs an exceptional bank.

What makes Trade Development Bank exceptional? To start with, there is our policy of concentrating on things we do unusually well. For example, trade and export financing, foreign exchange and bank notes, money market transactions and precious metals.

Geographically, too, we work mainly in areas where we have something special to offer. This includes the U.S.A. (our U.S. affiliate, Republic National Bank of New York, is now one of America's 60 largest banks). It also includes a number of countries which, frankly, many other banks lack the first-hand knowledge to tackle properly. What's more, we keep our back-office systems running abreast of our business. You may not notice this directly, but it shows up in quicker decisions and fewer errors. Serving our clients well has helped us grow uncommonly fast. Today, we're big enough to provide most of the sophisticated facilities of the international banking giants but lean enough not to keep you waiting for decisions.

"An office building in Texas? "A restaurant in Buckinghamshire?"

"No, I want a garage in Puerto Rico."

That bit of dialogue isn't as wild or far-fetched as you might

Herald Tribune readers with money to invest very often have interests or requirements that may seem unusual to others. And often enough they can find what they're looking for in the International Real Estate section of their favorite newspaper.

Which is exactly why individuals or companies with real estate to offer place their ads in the International Herald Tribune. It reaches the right audience. With the right kind of money. Fast. And it's the audience, after all, that makes...

Herald Tribune ads work.

Tenneco recorded the best first half year in its history as the Company's growth continued during the second quarter of 1978.

Net income for the quarter was up 11% and operating revenues 13%, compared with the same period in 1977. Net income totaled $118.3 million on operating revenues of $22 billion, compared with $106.5 million and $1.9 billion a year earlier. Fully diluted earnings per share climbed to $1.09 in the 1978 quarter versus $1.03 in 1977.

For the first half the Company showed an increase of 8% in net income on a gain of 12% in operating revenues, as summarized in the table above.

This growth is the result of an aggressive program of capital expenditures which reached a record $714 million in 1977. Of the $900 million budgeted in 1978, more than half is for the development of oil and gas reserves and new energy facilities.

Commenting on the results, J. L. Ketelsen, Chairman and CEO, said, "We believe second half performance will be well ahead of the 1977 period and that 1978 will be another excellent year for Tenneco."

Eugenie was different. She was Scottish on her mother's side, des-cendant of a family which had supported the Stuarts — one ancestor had been hanged in 1746 for backing Bonnie Prince Charlie. Her father was a Spanish soldier of fortune with pretensions to a royal background. He had fought for Napoleon I, whom he admired.

Louis Napoleon met Eugenie at an Elysee reception, introduced by the Rothschilds. He fell in love marrying only for sex.

Eugenie's first priority was to bear a child. She did, with difficulty, and that child, the prince imperial, died in battle as a British vol-unteer battling the Zulus in 1879. Eugenie proved a good and faithful wife in many respects, but she was frigid and a man-hater: "Men are worth nothing at all," she said. Na-

Duff tells it effectively, using a structure similar to that in his dual biography of Victoria and Albert. He knows the milieu of royalty and its able to evake its personages as is able to evoke its personages as human beings. Elevation and rank do not change character; they merely intensify both the good and bad qualities. Louis Napoleon and Eugenie had both before they were crowned - and after - but they were basically decent people who took adversity with dignity. Indeed, they were at their best in hard

The match was an unhappy one and there is even a hint, which Duff tends to credit after a careful analysis of dates and the premature birth of Louis Napoleon, that Napoleon I was his real father.

In any event, Hortense reared him in German exile, in a mansion which was a museum of Napoleon He was a physically and mentally backward child, and Hortense was careful to see that his education al-lowed him to develop without se-vere pressure. The experiment proved successful — Louis became fluent in four languages, read widely in history and economics, and became a writer himself. There remained in him the quality of otherworldliness which is often the case with backward youngsters.
Hortense had called him "le doux tenebreux." "the gentle dreamer."
Some of his dreams were not so gentle. He wanted a Bonapartist restoration, served with the Swiss forces to take training, wrote a manual of artillery. A publicist named Jean Fialin saw the opportunity for Louis Napoleon and the two began to dream and scheme. The conspiracy failed and Louis Napoleon was exiled to America. NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 14 (WP) Unless old age arrives abruptly, Muhammad Ali will defeat Leon Spinks in 15 rounds tomorrow night. It will be a workman-like job, marked by none of the soaring art that made Ali unforgettable. Time has robbed him of his genius and left him a laborer; strong and brave, yet a laborer. Of Ali the youth, only the mouth remains. Lis-

"Leon Spinks is the Vampire," Ali said to 1,000 persons who paid $3 each to watch him work out the other day. "He is the Vampire be-cause he doesn't have his front teeth and you see his fangs. I have told the world I will beat this Vampire if I stay out of clinches and on't let him bite me on the neck." Ali's eyes widened at the thought. "I might take a cross into the ring with me to scare off the Vampire," he said.

Better he takes a strong jab and Ali knows it. He loves to per-form for his worshipers, so he conjures up a vampire. But this heavyweight championship fight is no act. Whatever Ali is - con man or evangelist, hypocrite or philanthropist — he is above all, a proud athlete. The thought that he might be beaten badly in the ring, sent recling from pillar to post, is the nightmare of Ali's life.

That is why he will win the time; this time, if not Ali the artist we will see an Ali of resourceful-ness whose residual skills are good enough to handle Spinks.

"It's a mortal cinch Muhammad won't give away any rounds in this fight," said his trainer, Angelo Dundee. "That's just not going to work against this guy, because Spinks is a young lion."

Spinks is not a great fighter, but he is 25 years old with a body of rock and an animal eagerness for combat. Besides that, he is immune to Ali's psychological games (for the first time in memory, Ali is speaking kindly of an opponent, praising Spinks for giving him a rematch).

Before Spinks took Ali's championship, his courage in the ring was questioned. He flinched under attack. In with a mediocrity named Scott LeDoux, Spinks managed only a draw. He seemed a semi-pro stumblebum against an Italian named Alfio Righetti.

Form Is Questioned

to stick it to him good.
"I was so worked up telling myself, 'Don't make yourself look "I took him cheap because of that," Ali admitted. Well he might, bad. Wait for a close pitch to call Few umpires can bear the wrong. That first pitch to Freehan thought of a fight. "You take a man was right down the pipe and I and a question to be answered here is whether Spinks will revert to the LeDoux-Righetti form. If he does, 'I was so mad that the second "Ali has to help himself this pitch was a curve that bounced time," said Dundee, whose advice from the corner is sometimes heeded, sometimes not. "Remember, the last time Spinks just had a guy laylearned the lesson. I'd made a total fool of myself. I vowed I'd never do ing on the ropes, like a punching bag. Ali has to give him a little movement, make him chase him a little. That's all. LeDoux outstrengthed Spinks and Righetti it again, and I haven't. You can't cally makes the right decision instantly, and then say, 'OK, brain, tonight we're going to turn the circuits backwards to get Weaver.' " outboxed him. And Ali is stronger than LeDoux and a better boxer than Righetti."

With all the hardships of the job, Prospectors who sift through an Ali training camp for nuggets of useful information nearly always every umpire must frequently ask himself, "Why?" The reason, of course, regardless come up with lead. For 18 years, he Because of length of careers and number of games, no sport has the umpires are the ultimate baseball has been dreadful in training camp. Some witnesses this time say Ali has worked too hard, that he peaked three weeks ago and now is

They point to a miserable sparr-

Dundee agrees that Ali was sorry that day. "He looked brutal," the trainer said. "And I told him so." So the next day, Ali sparred without the protective headgear, a stratagem designed, he said, to make him less lazy in avoiding punches, thereby keeping his mind more on his work. His performance improved some, but hardly the "100 percent difference" Ali boasted of.

Not that it matters. Spinks, a lit-tle man next to Ali (195 to 220), is not a powerful puncher, and to win must do it over the 15-round route. Against an Ali ready to use his two decades of boxing wiles, the kid in his eighth pro fight is not a good enough boxer to win a decision.

But .

Always the "but" of old age.

"Ali is in shape," said George Benton, one of Spinks' trainers.

"But he is still 36 years old. Leon is in shape, too, and he is 25. You've got a 36-year-old fighter in condition and you've got a 25-year-old fighter in condition. Who would

The answer will come in, oh, the 14th round tomorrow night. More than anything else. Ali is motivated by self-made drama. It is important to him to be the first man to win the championship three times. When that superficial goal is added to the immense courage he has shown time and again, it will be enough to get him through a difficult 14th round and into the 15th, where he will win it strongly.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 14 (WP) Umpires, baseball's beasts of bur-den, lead lives of noisy desperation. "In the minors, I roomed with an ump who woke me up at 4 a.m.," said American League umpire Mike Reilly. "He was standing in the middle of his bed, yelling,

Peculiar Humor

Umpires are masters of bleak humor and sarcasm. "Would he have been out if I'd tagged him?" Balti-more first baseman Eddie Murray asked Bill Haller after a pickoff play. "Well," drawled Haller, you'd have had a better chance."

Umps do not expect any of this to change. Nightmares will always be an occupational hazard. Their eyesight will always be maligned as crowds demand their heads. And millionaire players will have a smart remark for a 30-year-old umpire making $16,500 a year, who eats his dinner at McDonald's.

The major leagues' 52 men in blue are rooted in a life-style that is one of the most peculiar in sports. "We have no health care, no job security, no tenure. Our pension plan is a joke," Luciano said.

"We take more abuse than any living group of humans, and can't give back any. If we're fired without notice, our only recourse is to appeal to the league president. And he's the guy that fires you. That's gotta be unconstitutional."

Lengthy Apprenticeships

"I was in the minors for 13 years," said Kaiser. "I thought about quitting 50,000 times, like we In my last year in the minors, in

A Trace of Masochism

Even the umps' $52-per-diem-plus-air-fare doesn't come close to meeting travel expenses when hotels range from $25 to $45 a day. "I'm a lousy tipper and I know every McDonald's in America," said

Perhaps no man could become a major league umpire without a trace of masochism in his nature. Every night we have to meet a challenge with a TV camera looking over our shoulders," said Luciano. "And believe me, when you've had two open dates in two months, you don't always feel like being challenged.

Often, the most important part of an umpire's day comes after the game, even after midnight. Those are the hours of forgetting. "You can't 'leave the game in the

They fly in the face of the credo that competition made America great and the flag respected. But New Games are growing anyway, say the founders.

One of the first New Games inventors is Stewart Brand, publisher of the Whole Earth Catalog, which caught the spirit of the young in the late 1960s.

Brand said that he thought up the first New Games Tournament "out of shricking boredom, my own and the boredom of other people, and that's good raw material for any innovation

One of his first games was World War IV, later called Slaughter, in which players try to do six or seven things simultaneously — knock each other off a mat while placing basketballs in waste baskets while the women try to de-pants

Prui is an elimination game in which blindfolded players jump around saying "prui, prui" until the last player is left.

Infinity Volleyball is a collective effort to keep a ball in the air to communal shouts of "68, 69, 70" . The loser gets good-natured Personally, I am dubious about any situation in life in which it is not okay to make mistakes," Brand said. "Unless we make mistakes, things can't get better."

Since their birth in 1973, the new games have won 200,000 followers, spreading into churches and

Some other activities are a tag game called Snake in the Grass, in which everybody winds up on the ground wiggling and hissing. Dutch Coast Invaded by Mud-Walkers

By Gary Yerkey

PIETERBUREN, The Netherlands (IHT) — There have probably been stranger pursuits. Still, the sight stuns: some 30 hearty souls, heads lowered, earnestly sloshing their way ankle-deep through thick mud, hell-bent for the horizon and a barren island five miles

This is wadlopen (literally, walking on the wad, or tideflat), in which, according to the organizers of the sport, The Wadloop Centrum, headquartered in this town 200 miles northeast of Amsterdam, some 25,000 mud-lovers engaged in 1977 alone, up from 300 in the first year (1962) the idea was tried. It is done at low tide from May through September — quickly. Occasionally, it means walking in water waist-high, more often in mere mud, and if done responsibly

(that is, with proper clothing, supplies and in the company of a guide trained and equipped for such excursions), it is safe.

Rumors, of course, are inevitable — 250-pound participants simply sinking out of sight, accountants off on a holiday losing their way in the fog and having to swim for their lives. But the only confirmed wodlopendeath came by heart attack several years ago, and the vic-tim, it is thought, would have met the same fate had he been riding a motorcycle or eating too vigorously.

Six Islands

The Wadloop Centrum organizes walks costing 7.5 to 22 guilders to six different islands strung 5 to 10 miles off the coast. Some trips, such as those to Simonszand and Rottumeroog. 10 miles away, are wadlop-ed one way and made by boat on the return. Others, like that the Engelsmanplaat, a sandbar whose official elevation at low tide is four inches, are walked in both directions, with the fast-moving tide rolling in behind the raturning mudeloop with the fast-moving tide. rolling in behind the returning mud-sloggers. Engelsmanplaat (literally, "Englishman's flat place") was so-named, so the story goes, for the kind of place an Englishmen would sell to a Dutchman - tempo-

Story also has it that the Romans reached this part of the world on conquering missions surprised to find the indigenous population living on man-made hills for protection from the sea. Twice in every 24hour period, the sea would recede, allowing families formerly isolated to reach shore. Thus history's first wadlop-ers.

But to walk in the mnd for something other than survival is something else again. Exactly what it is is unclear, although guides take the opportunity to educate wadlop-ers on land-reclamation projects en route. And for nature lovers the sport has its moments: At low tide, birds by the thousands come to the wad in search of food, seals lounge lazily on sandbars and other plant and animal life abound sea lettuce, mussels, jellyfish. It is said that sea dogs — the Dutch term for large seals - number about 500 in the area traversed by

What to Wear

The Centrum advises would-be mud-walkers to wear a knit cap, sweater, windbreaker, shorts, wool socks and basketball shoes (not tennis shoes), which collectively may make the difference between the participant — if not turning up on the pages of Vogue — returning to normal life or ending up in the sea. The organizers prohibit alcoholic beverages, request that participants take along a lunch (packed in water-tight bags) and say that it may not be a bad idea to take a camera along ("inexpensive, because of possible water damage"). The guides) — all volunteers — are furnished with first-id life and policie talking that light page to the course of the page o aid kits and walkie-talkies that link the groups to the Centrum in Pieterburen. Children under 14 are not allowed on excursions unless accompanied by an adult.

But nothing is free. "The Waddenzee," the Centrum's promotional pamphlet says, "is presently endangered by noise and other forms of pollution, including discarded packing materials, old shoes and other refuse of thewa diop-ers." It therefore urges fellow wadiop-ers to be tidy in the mud "We would hate to include you as one of those responsible for the litter.

A suitable reward for successfully completing one's first wadlop? Perhaps the simple joy of having experienced what one writer has described as "something like snow-shoeing on balloons made of yogurt, only messier." But the Wadloop Centrum goes a step further: It awards to everyone who completes the task a signed diploma —
